Art Unit: 2627

1. Claims 1-4 are objected to because of the following informalities:

a) The term –said—or –the—should be inserted in front of the term “image” in claim 1, line 5.

b) The term “date” in claim 3, line 2 should be changed to –data--.

Appropriate correction is required.

2. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

3. Claims 1-4 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Conroy et al (US. 2004/0121268 A1).

Conroy et al discloses an assembly having a data storage device having a surfaced with an image composed of a UV-responsive material ([0192] lines 1-7; page 5, [0116], lines 6-14; see also particularly figure 78); and a source of UV radiation positioned to provide UV radiation on the image ([0116], lines 6-14 and throughout the specification), as set forth in claim 1.

Regarding claim 2, Conroy inherently discloses that the source of UV radiation is disposed in a case holding the data storage device because the optical disc is for optical drive and the light source is located in the drive.

Regarding claim 3, Conroy et al also inherently discloses that the source of UV radiation is disposed on a reader reading data from the data storage device.

Regarding claim 4, Conroy et al discloses that the data storage is one of a DVD and CD disc.

Response to Arguments

4. Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 1-4 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.
